GIDEON: When Familiarity breeds Misunderstanding?

Over the decades in Sunday School most children only ever learn about two of the judges, Gideon and Samson and only in part. Many of us are familiar with the story of Gideon's testing of God with the fleece or of his victory over Midian with a handful of men, some trumpets and clay pots. What we don't learn about or forget is the word of God spoken against Israel for its idolatry at the start of the story, Gideon's half-hearted destruction of a pagan altar, the violence he inflicted upon his own people or the construction of an ephod that becomes an idolatrous snare as bad as the altar he tore down. We forget the fact the people wanted to make him their king and though he refuses there are times when that's how Gideon acts.

The danger is that our failure to read the story of Gideon as a whole leads to a flawed interpretation and unhelpful exaggeration of Gideon as a biblical hero. The story of Gideon, of the man, his family, his servants and the people of Israel is a story of weakness and doubt, all too human weakness and doubt. They are challenges every person, every Christian, faces again and again, especially in times of testing.

When we see the story of Gideon as a whole, in his faith, in his doubts and in his ego, we see that the antidote to weakness and doubt is and can only ever be God. It's God who saved Israel then through Gideon and the other judges and its God who saves us now through his Son and our Saviour the Lord Jesus Christ. This is a hard but profound truth Paul understood as we see in 2 Corinthians in appalling circumstances. No matter how hard it gets we look to him!

Romans 6:12-23
