When We Don't Live Happily Ever After

Most of us have seen and enjoyed one Disney movie or another whereby the end a Prince and Princess meet and marry and seemingly live happily ever after. Sadly in this day and age we all know something of the heartbreak of divorce whether personally or secondhand through a relative or good friend. For those of us in the latter group we've been torn in who we support, whose 'side we take'. The trauma can be almost if not as painful as dealing with the death of a loved one, and the consequences can endure for a long time afterwards.

One of the consequences of the sexual revolution was no-fault divorce, the very thing in its own way Jesus spoke against in the first century. In some ways divorce is almost too easy but on the other hand it is also cruel to expect a partner who is a victim of domestic violence or whose partner is an unrepentant adulterer to keep on in the relationship.

The sad reality is that relationships break down for a multitude of reasons. The narcissistic culture we live in only makes such things more likely. Therefore we need to continue to pray for those who are married and encourage good, healthy, loving and grace filled marriages. Romance and emotion are not enough and to have a foundation in Christ and a family in his people who can support and encourage us. It takes incredible strength and courage for a person to commit to living single over a lifetime for Christ. It takes another kind of strength to live and love another faithfully or a lifetime as well. For both Christ is indeed the surest foundation.

Also, we need more men to join the choir. ### Church Matters

In the next few weeks the Diocese will be holding Churchsafe courses. It is recommended that as many people as possible attend these courses. The aim is to make us aware of predatory behaviours so that we keep our children safe from those in the community who might think that churches are soft targets. If you are a welcomer or in children's ministry it is highly recommended that you attend a course every 3 years, however, the more people who attend, the better prepared and watchful we will be.

To register for one of the advertised dates, please follow the link below. On completion of the course you will be given a certificate. We would appreciate a copy of this for the church files.
